Mission & Vision

Mission

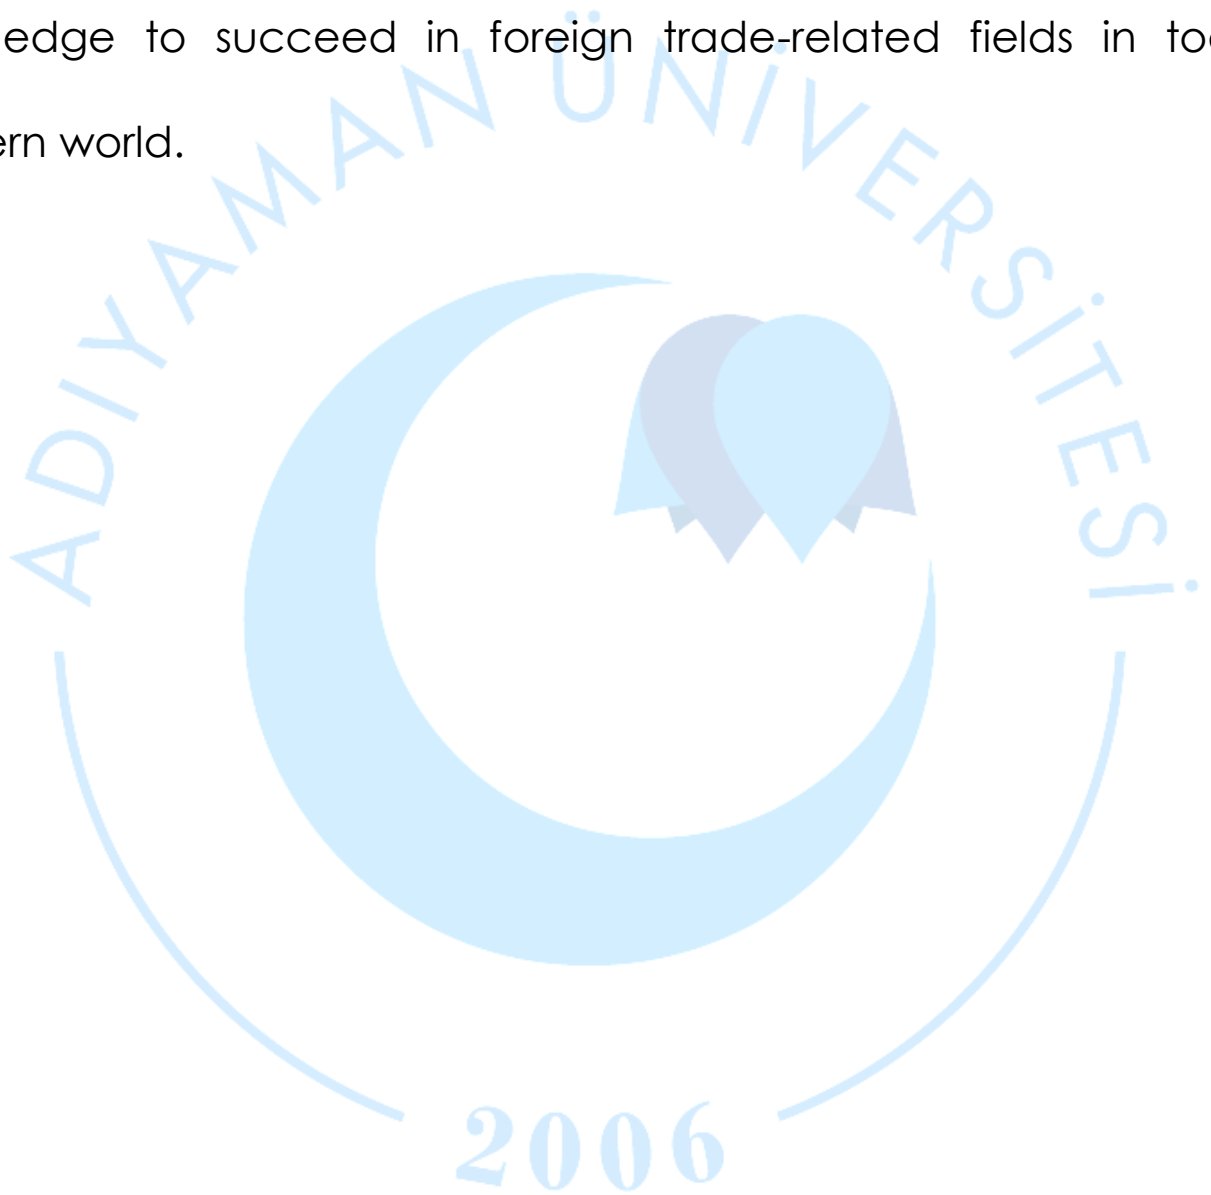

In today's world, where competitive conditions have gained a global dimension, our mission is to train qualified foreign trade professionals who possess both theoretical knowledge and practical skills required in the import and export units of companies engaged in international trade.

Our graduates are expected to closely follow current economic and technological developments, identify opportunities and threats in the market, manage these processes effectively, and act in accordance with an international perspective and universal ethical values.

Vision

In the new century we live in, our vision is to be a department that takes pride in its identity and contributes value to the global society and business world by educating professionals who continuously develop themselves both economically and technologically, and who are equipped with the necessary knowledge to succeed in foreign trade-related fields in today's modern world.

The Importance of Foreign Trade Departments

With globalization, countries have become closer to each other, enabling even very small businesses to operate in international markets. Import and export activities have gained significant importance in meeting the needs of the global society.

Companies aiming to succeed in foreign trade need a skilled workforce trained in this field to access international markets and produce goods and services that meet global standards. Therefore, the demand for qualified professionals with the necessary expertise in foreign trade continues to grow every day.

Why Choose the Department of Foreign Trade?

In a globalizing world, foreign trade is not just a profession; it is a strategic vision, a bridge between cultures, and a cornerstone of economic development.

The Department of Foreign Trade aims to educate multilingual and multicultural professionals who can lead global markets, understand economic trends, and master the dynamics of e-commerce.

Our education model combines theoretical knowledge with practical experience, providing you with a broad range of skills—from international logistics and customs regulations to e-export and marketing strategies.

Career Opportunities for Our Graduates

Graduates who successfully complete the Foreign Trade Associate Degree Program can work in the foreign trade departments of small and medium-sized enterprises, international logistics companies, and customs brokerage firms. They may also find employment in chambers of commerce and industry, banks and financial institutions (especially in foreign exchange departments), private companies engaged in import and export, insurance companies, customs and foreign trade consultancy firms, as well as international shipping companies.
