Importance of Departments of Accounting and Tax

Today, every business needs an accountant both for its own functioning processes and for legal transactions related to the public. In this respect, graduates of the department focus on providing necessary, reliable and healthy information for the processes in question. Although the information is generally sourced from recorded transactions, analysis, interpretation and reporting of these with appropriate techniques and methods are important for business stakeholders. For this reason, the need for qualified individuals who know the accounting systematic and follow the necessary processes reveals the importance of accounting and tax departments.

Why Department of Accounting and Tax?

Accounting and Tax Department is a department that covers many areas (such as economy, business, accounting, finance, tax). With this feature, it is the department that monitors the financial processes of companies and institutions with appropriate methods and provides the necessary information to the units within the company and the relevant units of the government.

Job Opportunities for Our Graduate Students

Graduates from the Accounting and Tax department are entitled to receive an Associate Degree with the title of professional accountant. In this context, employees in the pre-accounting unit monitor the processes and documents and stocks of the companies that are the subject of accounting and taxation and transfer this information to the relevant units. The job fields in which the graduates can work are given below.

- Accounting offices
- Financial Advisory offices
- Finance and accounting departments of private companies
- All kinds of commercial enterprises and companies
- Banks
- Companies engaged in foreign trade
- Insurance Companies
- Tax Offices
- Various financial institutions
- Revenue Offices
- Property directorates
- The Ministry of Finance
- All public institutions

Undergraduate Programs for Vertical Transfer from Accounting and Tax Department

Students can choose the relevant departments of four-year faculties if they get sufficient points in the Vertical Transfer Exam. Students who have completed their undergraduate education will have the title of Certified Public Accountant after three years of internship and if they are successful in the Certified Public Accountant exam.

Activities

As the Accounting and Tax Department, business trips are organized regularly every year in order for our students to reinforce the theoretical knowledge they have learned in the lessons, so that they can get to know the sectors they will work in the future. In addition, Adiyaman Chamber of Commerce and Industry is visited and it is aimed to have information about Adiyaman's economy. In addition, a dialogue is established with Financial Advisors, enabling them to share their experiences with our students.
